HARVARD
MEDICAL SCHOOL
TEACHING AFFILIATE

Associate Program Director – Primary Care Internal Medicine

Cambridge Health Alliance, a Harvard Medical School teaching affiliate, is an award winning, academic public healthcare system which receives national recognition for innovation and community excellence. Our community health care system includes three campuses as well as an established network of primary and specialty practices in the Cambridge, Somerville and Boston's metro-north area. Our practices serve an ethnically and socio-economically diverse patient population.

We are currently recruiting a dynamic primary care clinician-educator to become Associate Program Director for Primary Care Internal Medicine. This position is both administrative as well as clinical and ideal candidates will be full time and possess outstanding clinical and communication skills. Demonstrated excellence as a teacher, as well as strong interest in graduate medical education is required. Three -five years post residency experience and progressive leadership experience is preferred. The new Associate Program Director will lead residency re-design for training in a patient-centered medical home model. Academic rank will be commensurate with experience.

At CHA, we offer chronic disease management programs, a collegial work environment and a strong infrastructure, including an EMR. You will work with dedicated colleagues committed to providing a diverse patient population with excellent, high quality care. We have numerous graduate and undergraduate teaching opportunities through our affiliation with Harvard Medical School. Our physicians enjoy competitive salaries and a generous benefits package. At CHA, we strongly encourage women and minorities to apply.
